

Country house look now also available in the entry-price segment

Trendy country house style in uncompromisingly high quality

Country-house-style kitchens create a cosy atmosphere and therefore cater to the increasing merging of kitchen and living spaces. Häcker is expanding its attractively priced 'classic' segment to include two country house designs. With these additions, the company now offers kitchen designers programme alternatives in all price categories – from the entry level to mid-price all the way through to premium.

The character of the Oxford range with its striking frame is a linear Shaker style, which dispenses with decorative elements. The front panels are lacquered onto an ash structure and are available in nine different colours. Country house elements including pilasters, plate racks and arcade cabinets permit the creation of classically elegant kitchens.

Texel, the second country house design, comes in Cashmere and Magnolia. With its delicately profiled coffered front panels, it radiates romantic cosiness without appearing to be too playful. As the name suggests, the style of this kitchen is oriented towards an aesthetic that is hugely popular, particularly in the Netherlands.

About Häcker Kitchen

The owner-run family company Häcker has been manufacturing modern fitted kitchens at its site in Rödinghausen, east Westphalia – the home of the German kitchen furniture industry – since 1965. In 2012, approximately 1,100 employees generated a turnover of 383 million euros, with exports currently accounting for around 40 percent of sales. The development of the company is characterised by continuous growth and future-oriented investment. Currently, more than 60 countries spread across all continents are supplied with “Made in Germany” kitchens. The specialised trade has two product lines available for the various market segments: classic and classicART for the entry level and systemat and systematART for the middle and upper price segments.
